a MUSEUM for ME calendar

Traditionally, museums have been spaces where those objects that our societies consider important are preserved, researched and exhibited. Today museums do so much more to document memories and stories - our intangible heritage - and to integrate the worldviews of women, children, minority groups, and many other social groups who were previously under-represented.

Museums today are places where we can all participate by sharing our experiences to help create a better world. They are spaces where all of us are welcome and where we can critically discuss the past, the problems of the present and the future.

We invite you to create your own personal calendar, or to put together a shared calendar with your family or friends or classmates. Choose moments, from your past or your future, that are important to you: take time to remember and draw memories that are important to you, or try to imagine what the events of the future will be like.

Before you start:

This calendar works for any year.

Simply follow these steps:

- what month are you in today?
Find the page with that month
- what date is it today?
(e.g. example shown is 10th of the month)
Go to that number and mark a cross
- what day of the week is today?
(e.g. example shown is Wednesday)
Go to the top line, write in the day above today's date, then continue writing in the days from there onwards
- what day of the week is the last day of the month?
(e.g. Thursday 31st) so make sure you start the next month on the following day (e.g. Friday 1st)

.... and off you go!

My notes

Did something special happen this year that you would like to keep as a memory?

Or .... is there something that you hope will soon be happening in your life?

You can make a drawing or write about it here!
